Seven ordering rules for a unit turn.

And what each one costs when you break it.

These are not ~~knowledge~~ failures.

Everyone knows repairs come before paint. Nobody is thinking about it at 4pm on a Friday.

RULE 1

Trash-out waits for move-out.

Break it and the crew cannot clear the unit. You pay for the visit anyway.

RULE 2

Repairs wait for move-out.

You cannot scope what you cannot see. Break it and you find the rest on visit two.

RULE 3

Paint waits for repairs.

Patch after painting and you paint that wall twice. This one is broken by good intentions.

RULE 4

Flooring waits for paint.

The most common sequencing failure in turnover. Protection, drips, and sometimes new flooring replaced.

RULE 5

The clean waits for all three.

Repairs, paint, flooring, then clean. Break it and you buy a second clean.

RULE 6

QA waits for the clean.

Photos taken before the final clean cannot be listed. That costs a day rather than a fee.

RULE 7

Relist waits for QA.

A unit marketed before anyone walked it is a showing you apologize for.

Write your order down once. Put the reason next to each rule.

The rule alone gets overridden.
The reason survives.
